How Box Sizes Work

Boxes are measured length x width x depth, taken at the opening: length is the longest side, width the shorter side, and depth is how tall the box stands. A 15 x 9 1/2 x 2 apparel box is 15 inches long, 9 1/2 inches wide, and 2 inches deep.

Note that this is different from shopping bags, which are measured width x gusset x height — if you are sizing bags, see our bag size guide.

Box Styles in Plain English

Four constructions cover nearly every retail need:

- Two-piece lock corner — a folding box with a separate lid; tabs lock into slots at the corners. Ships and stores flat, sets up in seconds, and the telescoping lid adds strength. The workhorse gift box.
- One-piece folding — base and lid are a single piece; some sizes pop up automatically. Fast at the counter and stores flat.
- Rigid (set-up) boxes — built solid and do not fold flat. Sturdier and more upscale; this is how fine jewelry boxes are made.
- Magnetic boxes — rigid-feel folding boxes with a built-in magnetic closure. They collapse flat for storage, then snap together — no tape, no assembly. The premium unboxing look.
